

NWA's Response in Support of Meteorologists

Operational meteorologists work tirelessly around the clock to protect the American public from natural hazards. These dedicated individuals strive to clearly communicate the threats and impacts to our communities, navigating the complex and evolving systems Mother Nature provides us to empower leaders in our communities to make life-saving decisions. Meteorologists commit to the highest integrity, grit, and heart to help those around them. The NWA is proud to represent these individuals who remain dedicated to serving our country as a trusted source of weather information.

As weather risks evolve, so too do the needs of those seeking reliable support in the face of weather, water, and climate disasters. As we strive toward our vision of promoting excellence in operational meteorology to benefit society, the NWA will continue to nurture a space for constructive dialog to further that vision and to find novel ways to serve our neighbors, our partners, and American public.
