The modified hurricane track map continues to dominate @NOAA mentions on Twitter overnight and into this morning. The majority of the mentions are critical of the administration for altering the map with multiple comments berating the WH statement by RADM Brown. There are also several comments referring to the NHC forecast archive as evidence refuting the claim that Alabama was in danger. The number of comments voicing disappointment that NOAA hasn't replied directly have dropped dramatically compared to the previous 24 hours. NOAA and NHC Facebook accounts continue to be calm with a handful of comments on posts, none critical of NOAA.
