Lou...

After seeing more about Trump's comments about Dorian on the news, I went back into the archives and it turns out that the track he displayed on Aug. 29 was indeed what NHC had issued, so my barrage about his description of the storm track was unfair. But someone at the White House added the nominal 10%, give or take, probability area of tropical storm force winds extending into southeast Alabama associated with the Aug. 29 track which prompted Trump to declare that AL would be "hit hard". It's obvious his staff went off on their own w/o coordinating with NHC and didn't know what they were doing, which made Trump look bad and might have led some to question NHC's credibility.

Lou..

In addition to all the other people Trump has insulted over the past few years, he has managed to insult the entire meteorological community in the U.S., especially NHC, with his absurd description of Dorian's storm track. But besides being insulted, we are all laughing at him.
