Having grown up in Florida, I fully appreciate the difficulties of forecasting hurricane tracks. I also understand and have experienced the challenges of convincing "locals" to evacuate. Limited routes to exit barrier islands, protection of home and property, and faith in forecast are just a few reasons people cite to stay put. Please don't allow the credibility of NOAA and, by extension, the science of meteorology to be added to the list. If you stand by the statement released by NOAA, you need to put your name on it. Remember, sir, lives could be at stake. Thank you.
